

Momsmakingsixfigures

by HEIDI BARTOLOTTA

When I started Momsmakingsixfigures.com in 2008, we had two little girls under the age of five and I was struggling. My challenge was trying to find the right mix of time and finances amidst all the demands that come with motherhood. Should I work outside of the home or decide to stay home, and what would that mean for my family's financial situation? Mothers today face so many pressures and questions, and the pressure to make the best decision weighs heavily on each of us. That's where Momsmakingsixfigures can come in; we have a business model that has helped many women find their personal balance-point. Some women work 10 hours per week, some work 40, but each one gets to decide the amount of time that works for her and, more importantly, when during each day she puts in that time. This is not a "get rich quick" thing, simply real women working together to create real income from real effort. If you or anyone you know are looking for something more, something different, we might be what you are looking for.

Stacy

I have the life I never dreamed possible when I was working for HSBC Bank. Flexibility with five children is a necessity.

Barbara

As a surgeon, I never owned my schedule but I owned lots of overhead, which meant I worked many holidays instead of spending them with my family. Over the last two years I have spent every holiday with my family thanks to MMSF.

Kellee

I love working, but I want my family to be the priority. This company has let me, not a corporation, dictate my schedule.

Jennifer

Coming from the corporate arena with lots of work-related travel definitely did not give me the ability to make my two daughters my priority. Now I volunteer in the classroom, chaperone field trips, and still have income – the best of both worlds.